PREFACE

The present Catalogue covers the additions to the Library since the printing of the first, and also the supplementary titles and other references received too late for the press during the progress of that work.

The plan now adopted follows the main lines of the former Catalogue which has received such generous commendation from scholars and librarians, but the endeavour has been to develop it further and embody in this such possible improvements as were suggested during its arrangement and publication. It is hoped, therefore, that this second Catalogue may be found even more comprehensive and fuller in detail than the first, not only extending subjects already included in that but giving many others not found in it.

The contents of collected works are placed under their respective subjects instead of merely under the name of the author. Articles contained in periodicals will be found both under the name of the author and under the subject. The purpose being, of course, to set forth all the subjects contained in a book in their various relations, the system of analysis heretofore followed has been even further developed. A reference covering more than one subject will not only be found as a whole, but each part of it may be used as a specific reference under its proper subject. The same method is used when a book includes articles on more than one topic, regardless of what its formal title may be.

Under certain larger subjects, such as the names of principal countries or persons of great eminence the system of division has followed an order deemed appropriate to each case, rather than an arbitrary rule forced to apply to all indifferently.

As the order is alphabetical it is hoped that reference to any part of the Catalogue will be an easy task. Only in the case of a few very extensive subjects, such as "The United States," "Great Britain," "France," and the like, will it be necessary to study the divisions to learn how much is embraced under the general heading.

In order to shorten the Catalogue as far as can be, consistently with its usefulness, titles have been cut down by the omission of all that is not necessarily descriptive.

The Library now includes 125,000 volumes, and they are classified on the shelves under seven great heads, viz.: Literature, Science, Social Economy, Philosophy, Arts and Technology, History, and Religion.

As all the later additions to the Library will find their proper notice in the Catalogue, it is needless to refer to them here. At the same time it may not be out of place to mention one of the most important, the collection of English County histories. Of these the Library now contains the monumental works relating to thirty-four of the forty English counties.

A few notable examples of this class may be mentioned, such as: Baker's History and Antiquities of Northampton. London, 1822–30, in 2 volumes, large folio; Clutterbuck's History and Antiquities of Hertfordshire. London, 1815–27, 3 volumes, folio; Hoare's Modern History of Wiltshire. London, 1830, 7 volumes, folio; Nash's Collections for the History of Worcestershire. London, 1751–82, 2 volumes, folio; and Nicol's History and Antiquities of Leicestershire. London, 1795–1815, 4 volumes in 8, folio.

The general work of arranging and editing the material to be printed has been confided to the care of Mr. JOHN PARKER, ably assisted by Mr. SAMUEL HILL, who has also engaged with Mr. ANDREW TROEGER in reading the proofs. The first proofs have been read by the Provost to insure still greater accuracy and to see that important subjects have not been omitted, and he has also examined the final page-proofs to detect irregularities which may occur in headings or divisions and in arrangements of type.

Beside the gentlemen above mentioned, great credit is also due to the other assistants in the Library for their unflagging industry and intelligence in contributing to the preparation of the Catalogue.
